

For years, the biggest issue paralyzing Washington wasn't the budget or health care—it was political dysfunction. NOW, THERE'S HOPE.*

“...Congress is actually doing things. Making compromises. Passing legislation.”

—The Washington Post, 4/21/2015

“Suddenly, bipartisanship has broken out on Capitol Hill.”

—Associated Press, 4/20/2015

Members of Congress “...are rediscovering what it's like to work together across party lines toward concrete, achievable goals.”

—U.S. News & World Report, 4/21/2015

Congress has approved a breakthrough, bipartisan agreement that protects Medicare, preserves it for the future, and rewards good doctors.

But to end the dysfunction, there's still more work to do.

Please call the U.S. Capitol Switchboard at (202) 224-3121.

Urge Congress to keep working across party lines to preserve Medicare and Medicare Advantage—and support legislation to replace the Affordable Care Act with pro-patient reforms.
